The Patriarchs' Ball on Monday night at Del-'s, which opened the week's gayetles, was monicos, really the chief social feature of last week. There several departures in the way of decorations and music, but in the main the general arrangements were nearly the same as in former years when the late Mr. McAllister managed the enterwhen the late Mr. McAllister managed the enter-tainments for the fifty Patriarchs. There were fewer foreign and eminent strangers present on Monday night than usual at a Patriarchs' ball, but the gor-geousness of the matrons and the freshness and simplicity of the debutante element were up to the customary standard of excellence. There was the usual display of brocades, sadius, silks, faces, jewels and pretty faces, and the cotilion, led by Elisha Dyer, jr., who danced with Mrs. Edmund L. Baylles, was delightful to the spectators and full of sur-prises to the dancers. It followed the supper, which was served at small tables in the lower restaurant.

With the exception of a few receptions and dinner parties there was little entertaining done in town society people last week. The suburbs, especially Tuxedo, seemed to be the chief rallying points for society people, while the country clubs at West Chester, Hempstead and Cedarhurst have not been Chester, Hempstead and Cedarhurst have not been neglected, but each has had, and will have until after Wednesday, the usual holiday gatherings. The programme of the festivities at Tuxedo on Christmas included a large Christmas tree in the ballroom, and an informal dance. On New Year's Eve there is to be the usual frolic. In the early part of the evening there will be some tableaus, which will be followed by the usual New Year's Eve ball at the clubhouse. Every room in the clubhas been engaged for the holidays and many of the cottages in the Park are open and filled with large house parties.

The private balls and dances will all be given in January and the first two weeks in February. Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge will give a dance for young people Saturday of this week, January 4. Mrs. William Douglas Sloane will give a ball on January 13, and Mrs. Trenor L. Park has chosen Wednesday night, January 22, for her ball, which will take place at the Waldorf. The first assembly of the season is announced to take place at the Waldorf on Thursday evening, January 9. A wedding of interest to New-Yorkers will be

IT IS PASSED BY THE HOUSE.

A THIRD REPUBLICAN RESPONSE TO THE PRESIDENT'S APPEAL.

ONLY ONE DEMOCRAT RECORDED IN THE AF FIRMATIVE-THE VOTE ON THE FIRST SECTION WAS 170 TO 136; NO DIVISION ON THE SECOND -CARLISLE'S STATEMENT WON SUPPORT

FOR THE MEASURE-MR. CLEVELAND TREASURY SEVERLY CRITICISED

IN AND OUT OF CONGRESS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.] Washington, Dec. 28.-The bill to maintain and protect the gold reserve and to authorize the issue of certificates of indebtedness to meet temporary deficiencies of revenue passed the House of Representatives this afternoon. There was a of errors, which had brought the Nation to sion. The vote on section 1 was: Yeas, 170; nays, 136. Only one Democrat, Mr. Hutcheson, of Texas, was recorded in the affirmative. All the Populists who were present and Mr. Newlands, Nevada (Silver), voted in the negative, as also did eighty-two Democrats and forty-seven Republicans. Of the Republican votes against the bill two each, and Idaho, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming, South Dakota, Kentucky, Missouri, Iowa, Tennessee, Virginia and New-Hampshire one mission was passed by a unanimous vote; the bill to increase the revenues was passed by an overwhelming majority, and the bill to maintain e one of the principal features, at their home, No. | the gold reserve and provide means to meet temporary deficiencies of revenue was passed by a majority of thirty-four votes. Against the last two bills every Democrat, except one, whether he stands for or against the Administration, was recorded. Of course, the Administration desired the defeat of the bill which passed the House of Representatives to-day; not only desired it, but used active and unusual, if not unprecedented, means to accomplish it.

EFFECT OF CARLISLE'S STATEMENT

It was not strange to hear Mr. Dalzell in his speech to-day, referring to Secretary Carlisle's argument against the pending bill which | art (Rep., N. J.). was published in the newspapers this morning, who had been so long a member of the House of Representatives should have been guilty of such however, produced a contrary effect from that Albany, Dec. 28.-The marriage took place to-day which its author intended and perhaps expected. was responsible for the passage of the measure. TROUBLE SINCE THE DEMOCRATS CAME IN. but it is not probable that there were so many. Mr. Cannon (Rep., III.) said that the Resumption for a week it had been engaged in negotiations were not sufficient to meet the expenditures. 1875, the prospects of the bill grew brighter. Many and strong were the expressions of indignation against both President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle.

A "BUNCO GAME" ON CONGRESS.

esing sentences of the President's annual message, which was sent to Congress four weeks ago, in which he said, referring to his scheme of House, the Republican branch of the Government "financial reform":

I have suggested a remedy which my judgms approves. I desire, however, to assure the cough that I am prepared to acceptate with them in precting any other measure promising thorough a practical relief, and that I will gladly labor we them in every patriotic endeavor to further the terests and guard the welfare of our countryme whom in our respective places of duty we have udertaken to serve.

This Republican then said:

This Republican then said:

When I first read that I believed that the President was sincere and candid, and it seemed to me that there was a reasonably fair prospect of doing something for the relief of the Treasury and the protection of the gold reserve. I still believed so after reading his somewhat hysterical message which was sent to us a week ago, and I would not have believed, as I believe now, that within twenty-four hours after sending that special message to Congress President Cleveland or the Secretary of the Treasury had entered into negotiations with one or more members of the last bond syndicate for another issue of 4 per cent bonds under the authority conferred by the act of 18% it am now as firmly convinced as I ever was of anything that the Administration has been and is engaged in an attempt to play a bunco game upon Congress; that it has virtually concluded arrangements for the issue of $100,000.000 of 1 per cent bonds, and that President Cleveland has been determined from the first to take this course unless Congress would accept his scheme for the retirement of the legal-tenders and give the Secretary of the Treasury authority to issue an enormous amount of gold bonds for that purpose. I believe the Administration is determined to pile new burdens upon the people because Congress cannot and will not consent to do his bidding, and I also believe that his offer "to co-perate with them in perfecting any relief" was not made in good faith.

CARLISLE SEVERELY CRITICISED.

CARLISLE SEVERELY CRITICISED. The comments of Republicans on the conduct of the Secretary of the Treasury were even more severe, if possible, than those on the President. His bold attempt to defeat a relief measure which was pending in the House of Representawhich was pending in the House of Representatives, and on which a vote was to be taken within a few hours, was characterized as not only indiscreet and improper, but as actually indecent. It was recalled that when President Cleveland wrote a letter to the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee eighteen months ago, criticising and denouncing the bill which became the Tariff act of 1834, he marked his letter "confidential," and therefore probably did not expect at the time of writing to see it published in the newspapers. But the Secretary of the Treasury took it upon himself to rush into the newspapers with a statement which bears the marks of careful preparation and deliberation, in the hope of influencing votes and defeating a pending measure of legislation. The fact was also recalled that only a few days ago, when asked for information which might throw light on the cock-and-buil story about Russin's offer to lend $400,000,000 in gold to the United States without interest—a story which sounded as though it had been concocted for stock-jobbling purposes—the rame Secretary of the Treasury clothed himself in a mantle of imperentable reserve, and with freezing dignity said that "that was a matter he could not discuss," although it must be conceded that it was a matter which he could have discussed with as much or even greater propriety than he could offer to the country the statement published to-day in the hope that it would contribute to the defeat of a measure framed and supported by men of at least as much ability and experience in financial affairs as he possesses, and who are at least as patriotic and as deeply concerned on account of the country's welfare and prosperity as he has ever shown himself to be.

THE DEBATE IN THE HOUSE.

The unfavorable comments on the course of the President and his Secretary of the Treasury were by no means confined to private conversations among members of the House of Representatives. Members of influence and high standing tives. Members of influence and high standing in that body—men like Mr. Payne, of New-York, Mr. Cannon, of Illineis, and Mr. Dalzell, of Pennsylvania—did not hesitate to give utterance to such comments in the course of the debate which preceded the vote on the pending bill, and no Democrat had the courage or hardihood to resent them or deny that the criticisms were just and fair. Not even a "Cuckoo" chirped a chirp of dissent. Everybody appeared to feel that the Administration had pursued and was still pursuing a course which was unfair

> THE PROCEEDINGS IN DETAIL. SECOND DAY'S DEBATE ON THE BOND BILL-HOW THE MEMBERS VOTED.

Washington, Dec. 28.-After the reading of the journal to-day the debate on the bond bill was resumed in the House, the discussion to close at 3 o'clock. The first speaker was Mr. Brosius (Rep., Penn.). The gold reserve, he said, must be maintained, and the revenue to meet the expenses of the Government must be procured; these propositions were fundamental and indisputable. There was no difference of opinion on the floor respecting these two propositions; it was only when the House came to the consideraton of the means of carrying them into effect that contention and discussion arose, When the gold reserve disappeared, the payment of specie must be suspended, and when it fell below the danger line ($100,000,000), doubt and distrust seized the people. The deficiency of revenue, in the opinion of Republicans, was the chief sinner in the comedy vote by yeas and nays on the two sections sep-arately, and the bill was passed without a divi-ficiency ceased, the Treasury would no longer suffer When the de-Mr. Brosius said that he could not fail to notice that in the debate on the emergency revenue measure the other day no one had spoken of the history That history, he said, was both interesting and instructive. The present was the third notable revenue defficiency which had occurred in time of peace. They had all been caused by the same thing, going too far in the matter of taking Onio and Illinois contributed seven each, Cali- off customs duties. There was sufficient power fornia six, Kansas five, North Carolina three, | now existing in the statutes to authorize the officers Michigan, Minnesota, Oregon and Washington of the Government to borrow money, but it was not a suitable method. In his opinion it was not proper that the Treasury should be farmed out to a foreign Power; it was not proper that the sleuth-hounds of a combined foreign and domestic syndicate should be employed to hunt up the gold that The Republican House of Representatives has the Government needs. It should be obtained thus favorably responded three times within a through loans properly and openly made by the fortnight to the appeals of the Democratic Execu-tive. Mr. Parker (Rep., N. J.) said that the House was called on to answer yes or no to two simple questions: (1) Shall we provide revenue to meet the expenditures of the Government? Who could say "no" to that? he asked. (2) Shall we lower the rate of interest on bonds, the issue of which was authorized by the act of 1875, and open the books for their subscription to the people of the United States? What need of amendment to these two simple ques tions? They would only tend to confuse the efforts to afford direct relief to the necessities of the Gov-

Mr. McLaurin (Dem., S. C.) said that he opposed the bill because it would not only increase the bur-dens of the Treasury, but legalize a series of improper and unfounded assumptions by the Secretary of the Treasury. The bill should clearly and exa violation of the proprieties and decencies of pilcity state the purposes of its provisions so that public and official life. The Carilsle statement, the people might know the intention of Congress. He was opposed to the bill for the further reason that he believed rather in restricting than extending the discretionary powers of the Treasury Department. All sufficient relief could be afforded if the Secretary would obey the law and establish an American system of finance, treating all the obligafesto and voted for it. If there were eighteen tions of the Government alike and in accordance

The gentleman from South Carolina, a member of the Committee on Ways and Means, said that he would take from the Secretary of the Treasury the authority he had. The Secretary of the Treasury could not have too much power. But it should be exercised under conditions that lead to prosperity, and not to adversity. The Republican House, being the doctors, propose a remedy which, in their opinthe doctors, propose a remedy which, in their opin-ion, will reach the root of the disease. You Demo-crats do nothing but criticise and object. God Al-mighty never made such a set of men, so ready and williag to tear down and criticise, without the power to build up." (Laughter.) The proposition to lower the rate of interest, Mr. Cannon said, the Deteocrats could have had at the Cannon said, the Deleocrats could have had at the last session, but they voted solidly against it. "And you will vote against it solidly to-day, you free-silver-coinage, 16-to-1, Democrats," he said, "because you want to impair the value of the currency, and you cuckoo Democrats because the President has sent down his orders for you to vote sentent. It is a sent down his orders for you to vote against it. If the Schate and President shall pass is bill, well and good; if they shall not, the inis bill, well and good; if they shall not, the House of Representatives will have done what it believes to be the best thing to restore the credit of the country, and a prophecy of what we shall do when we come into Juli power in the Government of 1877." (Applause.)

Mr. Hartlett (Dem., N. Y.) opposed the bill, he said, because in his opinion it would tend to spread still further distrust instead of confidence in the still further distrust instead of confidence in the fiscal system of the country. He criticised the Republicans for not giving the President and Secretary of the Trensury the relief they had asked. "I have listened to this debate," said Mr. Tawney (Rep., Minn.), in beginning his remarks in support of the bill, "with some interest and astonishment lefore proceeding to discuss the proposition of the bill, I desire to state a few facts which preceded the presentation of this bill to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means." Mr. Tawney read from the President's message requesting Congress to do something to sustain the credit of the Government. It was then well understood by all including the President, that a gold bond bill could not by any possibility be passed through this House or through the other branch of Congress. And yet now it appeared that the Administration was of the opinion that a bill to sell gold bonds is the only possible form of relief. "Why? why?" asked Mr. Tawney. "Because they have already arranged to sell another issue of 180,000,000 of bonds to a syndicate who want that form of obligation." Mr. Tawney? said that the plan of relief proposed was in line with what had been advocated by the Republicans in the Liffic Congress, the support of which then met the universal approval of the Republicans in the Liffic Congress, the support of which then met the universal approval of the Republicans in the Liffic Congress, the support of which then met the universal approval of the Republicans in the Liffic Congress, the support of which then met the universal approval of the Republica

BAILEY WANTS THE BULLION COINED.

Mr. Balley (Dem., Tex.) declared that the colnage of the bullion in the Treasury was the wisest and of the bullion in the Treasury was the wisest and best solution of the situation. It was the plainest business proposition, he said. The Government should use what it has on hand, instead of borrowing more and paying interest on it. The silver circulation, Mr Bailey said, was not supported on gold, but was maintaining itself. The Secretary of the Treasury, in response to a resolution of inquiry from the House, had said that he had never redeemed silver certificates in anything but silver deliars, and had never attempted to redeem silver dollars in anything.

Mr. Connelly (Rep., Ill.) announced that he did not like the bill, but argued that the spirit of the debate showed that if the Republicans had proposed a bill making gold, silver and paper dollars equal to each other, the other side would still oppose it. The greenback was consecrated, he said by the blood of the country, and he created considerable laughter by his assertion that it was like the man who went from Jermalem to Jericho—it had fallen among thieves. He wanted the greenback to maintain its integrity among the moneys of the world. For this reason he would vote for the bill, although he did not like it.

Mr. Payne (Rep., N. Y.) insisted that the fear that this bill would the up the greenbacks was groundless. It sets the law where it had been since 1875, and it was as impossible to the up a dollar of greenbacks under it as it was under the law of 1875. If the Secretary of the Treasury could the them up under this bill he could under the existing law. The defeat of the bill, he said, permitted the Administration to borrow from a foreign syndicate at a rainous premium, which it was the duty of Congress to prevent.

Other speeches were made by Messrs, Hopkins (Rep., Ill.) Burton (Rep., Me.). Marsh (Rep., Ill.) and Russell (Rep., Conn.).

MUSIC.

MR. PADEREWSKI IN BROOKLYN.

A recital was given in the Brooklyn Academy of Music last evening by Mr. Paderewski. It was under the auspices of the Brooklyn Institute, which organization's department of music has been exerting itself this winter with excellent results to the city's musical activities, and the audience, though it did not entirely fill the hall, was large and eager to submit to the spell of the great artist's magic The programme contained nothing that Mr. Pader-ewski has not played in this city, though it was not identical with any of the individual lists that he has employed for his Carnegie Hall recitals. The great variations by Brahms on the theme by Handel, the Beethoven sonata in D minor, and Schumann's "Carnaval," a number of the Chopin pieces and others by Liszt, Rubinstein and the concert giver others by Liszt, Rubinstein and the concert giver himself made up the evening's music. Mr. Pader-ewski's playing was perhaps not so flawless technically as it sometimes is, but it was in his most poetical vein-rich in contrasts of mood and color. There was abundant enthusiasm, though the audience was not so insatiate in its demands as those of New-York are prone to be. Mr. Paderewski repeated the ninth Chopin study, and added to the printed list a waitz and a prefude by the same composer.

THE ORATORIO SOCIETY. The Oratorio Society last night performed the plous duty which it set for itself long ago, and gave its annual Christmastide performance of "The Mes-siah." In the absence of Mr. Walter Damrosch, his brother Frank conducted the preparatory rehearsals and the concert, and to his credit it must be said that the performance was the best that the oratorio has received here in many years. There was no ex perimenting with the orchestral accompaniment, the perimenting with the orchestral accompaniment, the sensible conclusion seemingly having been reached that Mozart's instrumentation is good enough. But this circumstance was inconsequential, the more significant and gratifying one being that the choir had been inspired with fresh enthusiasm and sang with splend d precision, nice intelligence, tasis, justness of intonation and feeling. It was far from a perfunctory performance, and we have had so many perfunctory performances of the sublime work in recent years that the change was a genuine refreshment. The soles were also in capable hands. For an unexplained reason Miss Brema, who had been announced to sing the contraits soles, was not in the quartet, and Mrs. Carl Alves, known and admired in the part, took her place. Her companions were Mme. De Vere-Sapio, Mr. H. Evan Wilnams and Mr. Ericsson F. Busnnell. Mr. Frank L. Sealy played the organ with his customary skill and discretion.

CUBAN INSURGENTS' PROGRESS.

RECOGNITION SHOULD BE GIVEN.

From The Atlanta Constitution.

The recognition of the beiligerency of the Cubans should not be delayed another day. It will be worthless and will reflect no credit upon us if we wait until we see that the islanders are certain to win in their fight for freedom. The Cuban Republic looms up as a reasonable certainty, and Congress should lose no time in giving it proper encouragement. As a free people we cannot afford to hold aloof from our neighbors who are fighting for freedom. From The Atlanta Constitution.

SOLDIERS IN COMMAND.

From The Wheeling Inteiligencer.

Campos must realize by this time that Gomez and Maceo are no mean strategists. One weak point in the Cuban campaign was thought to be an utter lack of capable leaders. To start from the eastern end of the island with two columns of poorly equipped men, outwit the first captain in the Sbanish Army and unite the columns and bring them within fifty miles of Havana is no mean military performance. The men who have accomplished this are soldiers. From The Wheeling Intelligencer. this are soldiers.

If the rebels should take Havana recognition of their bellicerent rights would not be far off, but it seems to be extremely improbable that they will do so. The insurgents have made a wonderful advance, and their path has been one of destruction. If, after burning the rich plantations of Malazzas, they escape and prolong the struggle by their raids and bushwhacking methods, it seems only a question of time when Spain will have to give in, because the war is costing her from three to four million dollars a week, and her finances are already bankrupt.
